THE LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER

Written by

A. Writer

EXT. LIGHTHOUSE - NIGHT 1

Rain lashes the tower. The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow.

MARA
(shouting)
Is anyone up there? The light has gone out and the boats are still at sea, every one of them.

KEEPER (O.S.)
Go home, Mara.

She tries the door. Locked.

CUT TO:

INT. LAMP ROOM - CONTINUOUS

The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow. The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow.

KEEPER
Forty years I kept it lit.

MARA
Then keep it lit tonight.

The beam sweeps the water.

The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow.

The beam sweeps the water.

The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow.

The beam sweeps the water.

The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow.

The beam sweeps the water.

The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow.

The beam sweeps the water.

The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow.

The beam sweeps the water.

The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow.

The beam sweeps the water.

The lamp room hums with a low mechanical note while the great lens turns, throwing its beam across black water and the long reef beyond, where the swell breaks white and slow.

KEEPER
Hand me the oil.

FADE OUT.